It's not a book, but it's slightly closer

November 4, 2005

Raymond Chen

TechNet Magazine has picked me up as a columnist, and in their November/December 2005 issue they granted me the great honor of being on the back page. My opening salvo is an IT-ized version of one of my more popular early articles, but future issues will contain never-before-seen random musings on subjects of interest to IT professionals.

And no, I don't get paid to write that column either.

You can learn more from the TechNet Magazine Blog, including how to get a free subscription.

Raymond Chen

Follow