

The truth about 4/29 the government doesn't want you to know

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20070806-01

August 6, 2007

Raymond Chen

With the loss of the Weekly World News, I'll have to rely on the trustworthy Internet to keep me informed of government conspiracies. I happen to be partial to 4/29truth.com, which uncovers the strange coincidences and inconsistencies in the "official" explanation of the tanker crash and fire on April 29, 2007 that destroyed a highway overpass in the San Francisco Bay Area. (This site is so noteworthy, even The Los Angeles Times sang its praises.)

My favorite factoid: The only way Governor Schwarzenegger could have gotten to the scene in time was if he was already en route when the explosion occurred, proving that the explosion was no accident.

Raymond Chen

Follow

