The dangers of taking a service droid off script

October 5, 2007

Raymond Chen

In the discussion last year regarding retail companies allegedly not collecting personal information as aggressively, a few people mentioned tactics for confusing salesdroids. For a while, I would intentionally confuse salesdroids by using my passport as identification. But far more frustrating is when I manage to confuse salesdroids completely by accident.

Raymond Chen

Follow

