

At least it's clear who will NOT be bunking together

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20130722-01

July 22, 2013

Raymond Chen

I dreamed that I was on a business trip with two colleagues. We discussed Canadian science broadcaster David Suzuki and how in photos of him as a teenager, he looked like Elvis Presley. (Note: Not actually true as far as I know. Remember, this is a dream.)

Fortunately, the hotel room we booked had three beds. But if Michael Jackson hadn't canceled, then two of us would have had to double-up, and we briefly discussed who would be bunking together. Possibly my two colleagues together, or me with the first colleague, or me with the second colleague. It went without saying, however, that had Michael Jackson actually shown up, he would definitely have been given his own bed.

Raymond Chen

Follow

