

Whoa, that fitness tracker is a really expensive watch

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20180417-01

April 17, 2018

Raymond Chen

My mom saw that her friend was wearing a new watch.

Her friend said, “It also counts how many steps I took today, keeps track of my exercise, even monitors my sleep.”

My mom replied, “I used to have a watch, but its battery died after only two years! It’s such a hassle replacing the battery.”

Her friend answered, “Oh, you just recharge it every few days. It’s called a FitBit.”

My mom said, “Wow, it recharges. So you never need to replace the watch battery. How much did it cost?”

“Around $150.”

My mom said, “Whoa, that’s a really expensive watch. Mine was only $15.”

Hey mom, you know what else is an even more expensive watch?

A BMW.

Raymond Chen

Follow

